LEARN MORE

September 30 2021 will mark the first National Day for Truth and Reconciliation — an annual commemoration honouring the children who died while attending residential schools and the survivors, families and communities still affected by the legacy of the residential school system.

What You Can Do

National Truth and Reconciliation Day allows us to honour those affected by the residential school system while providing us with the opportunity to participate in reconciliation. Consider incorporating the following into your day:

- Wear an orange shirt to honour the survivors and victims of the residential school system.
- Participating in a local event
- Support the work of Indigenous artisans and their traditional craft
- Learn the history
- Be considerate

“Together, Canadians must do more than just talk about reconciliation; we must learn how to practise reconciliation in our everyday lives—within ourselves and our families, and in our communities, governments, places of worship, schools, and workplaces. To do so constructively, Canadians must remain committed to the ongoing work of establishing and maintaining respectful relationships.”
